In this engaging volume, Jon Dron views education, learning, and teaching through a technological lens that focuses on the parts we play in technologies, from language and pedagogies to computers and regulations. He proposes a new theory of education whereby individuals are not just users but co-participants in technologies.

About the Author

Jon Dron is the Associate Dean, Learning and Assessment in the Faculty of Science and Technology at Athabasca University. He has received both national and local awards for his teaching and is author/co-author of over 150 academic publications in the fields of education and technology. His eclectic academic background includes post-secondary qualifications in philosophy, information systems, higher education, and learning technologies.

Overview	Save the date: 4-6th October 2023!
Our Team	Academic and Research Integrity Conference Ireland 2023
Teaching & Learning	Hosted in Galway City by University of Galway, Ireland, in partnership with National Academic Integrity Network (NAIN).
Technology	Teaching, learning, and research are all underpinned by integrity. Higher education (and its relationships with wider society) depends on mutual trust, ethical behaviour, openness and respect. There is, however, a sense of a growing threat to these fundamental values from dishonesty, malpractice, fraud, and indeed deliberate targeting by cheating providers, predatory publishers, and others. Technology (including advances in artificial intelligence) is also considered to have exacerbated this threat in recent times.

HySkills

29th June (Kelvin Martins, Lecturer, CCT involved in HySkills)

HySkills is grounded on the premise there will be a skills gap in the transition to renewable energy and the growing hydrogen sector and therefore a need for a suitably educated workforce. HySkills' consortium consists of transnational partners with expertise in energy, hydrogen, sustainability and education. This webinar will discuss the main outputs of the HySkills Project.

Who should attend: Prospective Students & Teachers; Energy, Transport & Hydrogen Industries; Government Departments; NGOs; Educators; but anyone is welcome to attend.

Guest Speakers: EFI Tech Germany, Promea Greece, The Artic University of Norway, South West College Northern Ireland & Dublin City University Ireland
